Export decreased by -17.58% YoY mostly driven from export in natural oil, while imports decreased by -18.03% YoY. Equity market closed weaker in 2015 as corporates earnings momentum slows, the index fell 12.13% YoY in December. Weaker macroeconomic conditions including slower pace of government spending, increased government intervention in several industries and weakening IDR due to external factors all resulted in relatively weaker economic growth. Foreign outflows have been the dominant trend in the market in 2015 and consequently resulting in higher than usual volatility in the IDR. That said however, we see that 2015 marked the start of a reform process in Indonesia in determining government policies and priorities for the longer term horizon. Execution on the ability for the government to implement new policies is crucial which saw challenges in 2015 remains the key risk factor. Nonetheless, government execution is expected to be somewhat smoother in 2016. In summary, Indonesia's long-term prospects remain constructive, be it gradual. Sector wise, the Agriculture Sector was the best performing sector this month, rising by +8.18% MoM.
